NAVIGATING TOWARD HEALTH AND WELLNESS

Andrea Palanca is currently in the process of obtaining her Bachelors of Science in Biochemistry at the University of Calgary. She is driven by her personal mission to contribute to cancer treatment and research. With a keen interest in oncology research with a focus on cancer survivorship, Andrea is dedicated to gaining valuable experience in this field.

Andrea's previous experience consists of technical report writing and academic literature review, skills she will be using as a summer student with the Cuthbert Lab as she works on conducting a scoping review. Outside of her academic and research pursuits, she loves watching and discussing movies, experimenting with film photography, and spending time with family.
